Economics is an important part of life with strong implications for sustainability. We can teach children about choices they can make and the reasons behind such decisions. This includes discussing what we choose to buy or not, and sharing the reasons we do so with children. Understanding how and why we make choices each day about the goods and services we select and use to meet our needs creates a positive foundation for learning. Reviewing the physical spaces our children want to learn will also inform the ways we can we provide them with agency to explore.

Workshop Includes:

- Ideas and inspiration for involving children in practical activities and conversations
- Links with EYLF and NQS
- Planning tips to review and utilise physical spaces and resources
- A chance to connect and share with other early years professionals

This workshop is FREE for services within the City of Cockburn. A fee of $20 applies to non City services.
